Biography: Denise Flint is a professional freelance writer with numerous articles and awards to her credit. Before moving to Newfoundland and Labrador she worked as a columnist and chief reporter for two weekly newspapers in Manitoba, which gave her experience and familiarity with all forms of journalism. During that time she wrote numerous profiles of community members and articles about places of local and historic interest as well as more traditional news stories. Monday might have seen her interviewing the Minister of Education while Tuesday had her riding with the volunteer fire department and Wednesday saw her covering events at the local curling rink. Since moving to the St. John's region she has established a successful freelance career with articles appearing in magazines and newspapers locally, regionally and nationally.

Denise has edited two newsletters and has extensive experience editing and proofreading government documents and scientific papers for publication in peer-reviewed journals.

Denise has done a considerable amount of work for the provincial government as well as corporate and not-for-profit clients.

An award-winning writer, Denise delivers fast and accurate work in an engaging style. She prides herself on her versatility and the care she puts into thoroughly researching the subjects of the articles she writes.

Denise has also written four romances under the pseudonym Barbara Burke.
